CITY COUNCIL AIDS RED CROSS DRIVE

At the meeting of the City Council last Monday night a report was read giving in detail the activities and good work being done by the American Red Cross in San Mateo county. The report was surprising to those who heard it read, as they had not realized the extent of the work of this organization, and especially in our own community. The City Council made a donation for the benefit of the Red Cross work.

The subject of liquor permits was brought before the Council by the receipt of two communications from local merchants expressing their desire to enter into the liquor business if permission would be granted by the Council. Mayor Smith explained that under a law voted by the people about a year ago, the state of California alone has the exclusive power to regulate the sale of liquor, and that counties and cities have no regulatory or police powers in connection therewith.

Plans for a Pacific International air pageant are being formulated which is the first of its kind to be held in Northern California. The pageant will be held at Curtis Wright Field, December 16 and 17. This pageant will attract many visitors from all parts of the country, and will be of great advertising value for the Peninsula. The Daly City Council pledged its support for its success, and referred the matter to the publicity committee.

The Pacific Gas and Electric Company communicated with the board, asking permisison to install a two-inch main on Castle street. Permission was granted, providing the work is done within the restrictions set forth by the superintendent of streets.

The semi-monthly salary claims were read and ordered paid.

PLAN TO EXPLAIN THE N. R. A. CODES

To the people of Daly City, Colma and Lawndale the local N. R. A. committee has a very important message. Get N. R. A.-minded, know the facts, study the codes and get their meaning, know their purpose.

In order for the people to fully understand just what the N. R. A. means to this country the various local committees throughout the country are educating the people through the medium of the press. Read your local papers, study the messages sent out and you can have no doubts assailing your minds.

Starting with the next issue of the Daly City Record, the codes which affect the immediate vicinity will be explained. If you like continued stories, start next week on the publication of the first code, then continue reading every week, eventually knowing thoroughly every code and its purpose.

Don't forget to attend the meetings of the committee. These meetings are held every Tuesday evening at 8 P. M. in the Council Chambers at the Daly City Hall. Everyone in this locality is urged to attend.

Correction—In last issue was a statement of Mr. Salesman, "There is on file in Washington actual proof that 2,287,539 men and women have been added to the list of unemployed by those who are living up to the various codes which they have signed." This should have been 2,287,539 men and women have been added to the list of employed.

Crash Injures Three Persons

When a truck and automobile collided at Capitol avenue and Farallone street, in Ocean View, last Monday, three persons received minor injuries. Those hurt were Charles Lafon, 1378 Fairfax avenue, Antone Manini, 1443 McKinnon avenue, and Peter Fouchter, 1371 Fairfax avenue. Manini and Fouchter were riding in the truck and received cuts and bruises. Thomas Farish, of Templeton avenue, driver of the automobile, was uninjured.

STUDENTS VISIT MODERN PLANT

The eighth grade of the Woodrow Wilson school enjoyed a very educational afternoon at the modern, well equipped Dairy Delivery plant. The various machines used in the preparation of our most nutritious foods, milk and ice cream, were explained to the group.

The pasterization machine, through which every ounce of the milk we drink must pass, is a huge tank where the milk is heated to a temperature of from 130 degrees to 160 degrees F., and is automatically kept at that temperature from 10 to 30 minutes to destroy harmful bacteria, after which it is cooled rapidly to a temperature of 40 to 50 degrees to check any new development of bacteria.

The cream separator is another machine which the group learned has made a great change in the dairy industry. This huge tank works on the principle that the heavier a whirling body is, the greater its tendency to fly from the center. From a tank at the top of the milk flows down into a large bowl or drum which makes from 5,000 to 9,000 revolutions per minute. The cream, being lighter, stays in the center and is drawn off by a tube. The heavier skim milk, flying to the outside, is drawn off by another tube.

The group was impressed by the great care which was necessary in handling milk to maintain clean and sanitary conditions, for bacteria develop very rapidly and may be the cause of spreading disease. Attention was called to the cap on the bottles which reads "Certified." This word implies farms regularly visited by milk inspectors and found to be maintaining healthful, sanitary conditions.

After visiting this section of the plant the children were taken through the section where ice cream was made, and not only received an interesting explanation of this machinery, but formulated their own opinion as to the high quality of the products produced by partaking of delightful refreshments.

On Friday, November 10, an exciting handball game was played between Jefferson and Woodrow Wilson schools. Jefferson won with a final score of 17-10. In the singles, Aladeno Sereni won the first set from George Johnston, 11-3. Frank Lucchesi won the second set from Gerald Reposa, 11-3. Lawrence Nannini won the third set from Peter Dawson, with a score of 11-2.

In the doubles, Lawrence Nannini and Elio Fontana played against Gerald Reposa and Robert Bradford. Woodrow Wilson school won the first set, 11-9. In this set, Jefferson school showed splendid co-operative spirit and good sportsmanship when they used their second best players against Woodrow. They did this to give the opposing team a fighting chance to win.

Robert Bradford and Jack Sheehan vs. Aladeno Sereni and Frank Lucchesi played the second set. Jefferson won with a score of 11-3.

Jefferson won the tournament by a score of 17 to 10.

Mrs. Harry Dana, former member of the San Mateo county health board, informed the San Mateo county supervisors last Monday that she wsa definitely out at a member of the health board. The supervisors accepted her resignation, but delayed naming her succesor until next week.

LEADING RACERS WILL MEET AGAIN

Opportunities for another struggle between Ima Count and Chictoney will be furnished at Tanforan at the fall session, with the opinion about equally divided as to the outcome of the tussle of the two year olds. Ima Count gave Chictoney three pounds and a beating in the Juvenile Stakes, which brought together the leading babies at the course. Since that running Chictoney has won in hollow fashion from a field of fleet ones.

Trainer Ted Horning points out that Chictoney was making his first start in a long time in the Juvenile, and ventures the opinion the bay gelding is now at the height of his form. The popular conditioner could like nothing better than sending his youngster out against the Eastern bred Ima Count. Chictoney is a native of this state, as fans who saw him in victories at Tanforan last spring recall.

Chictoney is a remarkably fast breaker and quick beginner, traits that give him an advantage whenever he is saddled for a battle out on the racing oval. His sire, Easter Bells, by Black Toney, had a wide reputation for scoring at sprinting distances in the colors of Richard Carman, Sr. Californians remember the prowess of Porter Ashe's Guenn, which comes in Chictoney's pedigree as the second dam of Commando, grandsire of Black Toney. Guenn was a clever performer on the race course and when mated with the Haggin imported Darebin produced Emma C, which won fame as the dam of Commando.

Ima Count, a son of the Kentucky Derby and Coronation Cup winner Reigh Count, is a smart individual himself, although built on smaller lines than his stablemate Riskulus, victor in the Burlingame Handicap at Tanforan.

Easter Bells, the daddy of Chictoney, is one of three stallions standing at San Luis Rey Rancho in the southern part of the state. Sweep's son Bon Homme, sire of the Community Chest Handicap winner Bonny Grafton, and the Tracery stallion Bistouri, with Easter Bells, make up the highly regarded trio. Asked as to the premier stock horse at the nursery, the managers said:

"We think so much of each of the horses we find ourselves unable to place one above the other. Each is premier to us."

We learn more runners of the class of Chictoney, Bonny Grafton, Marceita, a daughter of Bistouri, and other good ones are coming to Tanforan later in the fall, and also a band of promising two year olds in the spring.

Surpise Party for Popular Pair

A surprise party was given at the home of Mr. and Mrs. David Broom, at 15 Gambetta street, last Saturday evening by the Olivet Presbyterian church choir, of which Mr. Broom is organist. The ladies of the choir presented Mr. and Mrs. Broom with several beautiful gifts in appreciation of their untiring efforts in the past year in both church and choir work. The guests, seventy-five in number, took possession of the Broom home and in a few minutes the ladies had the tables beautifully decorated and refreshments were served, after which the evening was spent in solo singing and choir rehearsing. At an early hour they departed after cleaning up the remainder of the refreshments. All expressed themselves as having spent a very enjoyable evening and one long to be remembered.

VALUE OF CANADA GOLD AT HEIGHT

By J. W. MARCHBANK
Pioneer in Frontier Mining Work.

Conservative estimates place the value of the gold output in Canada for this year at $90,000,000. The twelve month period does not come to an end for a number of weeks, but approximations give us the high figure. This result is achieved, too, in spite of production not keeping pace with last year. International action has enhanced the value of the precious metal to an extent to make the differenec noted by students of the mining situation.

Reports from British Columbia are to the effect that unemployment has been materially reduced by men of the venturesome type engaging in placer mining in order to earn a livelihood. Relief rolls have been decreased in many centers of population, according to the last reports from the north.

Interest in the mineral industry is widespread and constantly growing. Indications are that the next spring will be epoch making for seeking in the modern scientific manner for the immense quantity of gold hidden in the creeks and mountains of not only Canadian possessions but Alaska. It has been officially stated that about $500,000,000 has been taken out of Alaska since the territory was purchased by the United States from Russia. "And that's only a beginning, folks," as a well known radio character says in boosting his show each week.

Some of the economists are talking of a return to what they call a "modernized" gold standard. According to a scheme proposed by a group of university professors of the Middle West there would be explicit agreements concerning the rules of management with ample room for sound experimentation with monetary institutions.

Emphasis is placed on bank credit by this group. In a recent statement it was said:

"The content of the gold dollar is relatively unimportant in general price restoration when compared with bank credit actively at work. It is assumed in Washington that the price of gold and the prices of other commodities move automatically in the same direction. The relationship of gold to prices is complicated and indirect. The high prices of 1926 were not due to manipulation of the weight of the gold dollar but were dependent upon a broad use of bank credit."

A comprehensive plan of credit is exactly what the Roosevelt administration is working out. Critics may find fault with some of the methods employed to bring about the desired result, but it must be said the aim is sincere and probably will be successful in the end.

There is much excitement in Southwestern Colorado on account of a strike by two prospectors. It is said gold nuggets worth $75,000 were picked up from the Arrowhead mine, near Mancos, in a few days. Oldtimers are guessing the miners may have uncovered the May Day vein, one of the richest in Colorado, from which a huge fortune was taken.

Rich developments are expected in the Taylor property on Bridge River, as the ground is said to be of the same formation as Bralorne, a great producer.

The Chamber of Commerce of the State of New York wants a return to the gold standard. It is opposed to an automatic commodity dollar or managed currency.

AMERICAN LEGION AUXILIARY HAS MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN

Daly City Unit No. 410, American Legion Auxiliary, held a special meeting last Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Julia Jordan. At present all efforts are concentrated on membership.

At the Aerial Pickup on Sunday, District 8 made well over 50 per cent of its quota. Daly City sent in nearly 50 per cent, including several new members. From all indications we will have our complete quota before the final count on December 23.

The purpose of the American Legion Auxiliary is to aid the widows and orphans of World war veterans, and to assist the disabled veteran to help himself. As winter comes on, many are in need of the necessities of life. The Auxiliary must help where charitable organizations can not reach. A large membership is necessary. Let every eligible woman avail herself of this opportunity to help.

LOCAL VETERANS INSTALL OFFICERS

The past week's activities of Old Glory Post No. 2044, Veterans of Foreign Wars, has been one of the most intensive. Commencing with Monday, November 6, up to and including November 12, has been one affair after another.

Monday night, November 6, the local Post was represented with its collors in the mammoth N. R. A. parade in San Francisco, joining with the Posts of that city in putting the Veterans of Foreign Wars in the public eye, and assuring the government that we are behind them 100 per cent.

Tuesday night, November 7, we conducted our N. R. A. parade in Daly City. An appropriate float, accompanied by the drum and bugle corps, drill teams and Auxiliary teams, with the massed colors of eight different units of the Veterans of Foreign Wars. Our own N. R. A. parade was one of the best attended and most varied representative of any parade held in the metropolitan area. Comrade Johnston is to be congratulated on the way he conducted this parade.

Friday night, November 10, the local Post and Auxiliary held a joint installation ceremony in the Masonic Hall. We were mighty proud of the wonderful spirit of co-operation on that occasion. We had representatives of the Canadian Legion, City Council, the American Legion and Department officers.

Department Senior Vice-Commander Seacord, of San Jose, was the installing officer, and conducted the ceremonies in a most impressive manner for the Post. The Auxiliary was given the spot during the installation, and bestowed upon the one qualified member of the local Auxiliary the honor of installing the 1934 officers.

In the Auxiliary, the following officers were installed by Mrs. Ethel Dorn, Past President, in a hall packed with comrades, friends and visitors, in excess of 300 attending the installation of the two organizations:

President, Mrs. Elsie Ireton; Senior Vice-President, Mrs. Fred A. Collins; Junior Vice-President, Mrs. Elsie Lewis; Secretary, Mrs. Genevieve Linser; Chaplain, Mrs. Nellie Jensen; Historian, Mrs. Louise Crowley; Guard, Mrs. Frazier; Patriotic Instructor, Mrs. Fred Gaiter; Musician, Mrs. Leila Lyons; Conductress, Mrs. Claire Peccanino; Color Bearers, Mrs. Briggs, Mrs. Refatti, Mrs. Neylan, Mrs. Hazelhurst; Trustee, Mrs. Nancy Hurley. The treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Brulez, has been confined in the hospital following a serious operation, and was unable to be present. Her installation will take place at a date in the near future, when she is able to be present.

In the Post the following were installed as the officers for 1934, a year dedicated to progress, increased membership and more constructive work in the community: Commander, J. W. Allen, Senior ViceCommander, R. F. Brulez; Junior Vice-Commander, M. V. Jensen; Quartermaster, A. C. Erwin; Chaplain, J. C. Lewis (second term); Adjutant, Fred R. Linser; Officer of the Day, R. M. DeCourcy;

PROVIDES FUNDS FOR BOTTLENECK

The San Mateo county supervisors last Monday took $25,000, set up in the budget for a county corporation yard, and placed it in a special road-improvement fund. They voted $12,500 out of the fund for work on the widening of the Daly City bottleneck.

County Engineer James S. James protested the transfer as irregular, but the board claimed it was obligated to the state and San Francisco to contribute a share of the costs on the Daly City project. It was pointed out further that work, now well advanced on the project, would cease unless the county gave $12,500, half of the sum it promised originally for its share of the work.

Plans for the establishment of a state camp in this county were referred to Captain Edward Macauley for a report in one week. The state camp will employ San Mateo county labor in Memorial Park. The board was informed that, if the camp wasn't wanted in this county, local jobless seeking work in state camps would have to be sent to other parts of the state.

Several county projects to be completed out of bond-issue funds were approved by the board. They include work on thhe Burlingame high and Hillsborough school grounds, work on the Atherton-Los Lmitas drainage projects and improvements at the relief home.

JEFFERSON UNION HIGH SCHOOL NEWS

Last Saturday marked the sixteenth anniversary of the signing of the Armistice. In order to commemorate it, an assembly was held and an address was given by Lieutenant-Commander Stewart Bryant, U. S. N., retired. He spoke on the subject of the United States and the World of Tomorrow, and stressed the importance of peace. He stated that the United States was the main nation to help attain such and with the help of Russia would be able to control world peace. These two nations would then be able to further peace efforts and make the world safer to live in. He suggested the dropping of aeroplanes, poisonous gases, and other warlike contrivances so that there would be no cause for war. As a conclusion he suggested that this plan would be possible, for the United States has the leadership, friendship, and statesmanship needed to do such.

Mr. Bryant was met with enthusiasm by all present. He is a dynamic speaker and mixes humor in with his speech in just the right proportion. He received a wonderful ovation and it is hoped that we shall see and hear him soon again.

The Indian football squad closed their grid season last Friday with a defeat at the hands of St. Ignatius high school. After driving down to the St. Ignatius goal line on three occasions and failing to shove the ball over the line the Indians played indifferent football, and allowed the Wildcats to score twice and win, 12-0. St. Ignatius, much heavier than the Indians, gained almost at will in the second half through the Indian forward wall. Joe Telesmanic and Fred Jorgenson led the Wildcat attack, each scoring once. The work of Burns and Beecher stood out for the Indians.

Brisbane's Utility District was finally disincorporated as a result of the election held last Friday. Those favoring disincorporation cast 174 votes while those favoring retention of the district cast 54 votes.

DALY CITY RESIDENT IS FATALLY STRICKEN

Christian L. Lorentzen, of Templeton avenue, was stricken fatally ill last Monday morning at 10:45 while employed on the grounds of the Crocker school.

Lorentzen reported for work apparently in good health, but he dropped to the ground desperately ill. His fellow workers thought he was overcome by the heat. They rushed into the school building to get him a drink of water. The foreman on the job sent three men with the stricken man to the Villa Sanitarium in Colma, where Lorentzen was pronounced dead upon arrival.

Lorentzen is survived by his wife, Christina E. Lorentzen, and Edward Lorentzen, of Palo Alto. He was a native of Denmark, a member of Crocker Lodge No. 454, F. and A. M., and Helga No. 3 of Dania.

The funeral and services were conducted from the chapel of H. F. Suhr Co., 2929 Mission street, near Twenty-fifth, under the auspices of Crocker Lodge, No. 454, F. and A. M. Inurnment was at Olivet Columbarium.

BOOK WEEK CELEBRATED

Pause a moment when you enter our local library and observe the Book Week display which Mrs. Jean O'Rourk was prepared. The significance of children growing up with books is brought to our attention.

Children don't have the chores after school that they had in years gone by. Modern inventions have given children and adults alike much leisure time and it could not be spent in a better way than reading some of the really fine books that will be available to adults and children after November 20. Some adults are still young with their children and can enjoy these fine volumes.

ARMENIAN SURVIVOR IS PRESBYTERIAN SPEAKER

Miss Alice Thomas, a survivor of the Armenian massacre in Turkey during the world war, will be the speaker in Grace Presbyterian church on Sunday morning at the 11 o'clock service. Miss Thomas was born in Armenia and experienced all the horrors of the Turkish rule. She is an earnest Christian and comes of a family of consecrated Armenian Christians. The church is located at Hanover and Evergreen and strangers are always welcome.

Presbyterian Youth to Give Banquet

On Friday evening, November 24, the young people of the Presbyterian church will give a dinner for the purpose of promoting a more intimate sociability among the members and friends of the church. The dinner program will consist of music, which will be climaxed by a speaker.

A NOTE OF APPRECIATION

I wish to express my sincere appappreciation to thoes who asssited in making the afternoon of November 6 such a delightful affair. It proves that the co-operation of earnest workers can accomplish great things for the children of our district and our state. Yours sincerely,

LILLIAN G. LANDINI.

On Saturday evening, November 4, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Wall were the guests of honor at a dinner dance held in the Oriental room at the Edgewater Beach Cafe (formerly Taits), the occasion being the tenth anniversary of their wedding. The place cards were made of tin, as was the centerpiece, which was filled with beautiful white spring flowers. Those attending were Mr. and Mrs. Wall, Misses Tessie O'Connor, Audrey Diamnod and Aice Ryan, of San Francisco, and Margie O'Connor, and Messrs. Louis Ehling, Kay Sorensen, John Sullivan and Dee Morris.

Narciso Stefanelli, driver of the car in which his wife Mrs. Vivian Stefanelli, was killed on Wdnesday of last week, was cleared of blame for the accident Friday after an investigation at Redwood City. State police took the Daly City restaurant man to the county jail directly from the hospital, but he was released when the officers failed to file a complaint. None will be filed, according to Captain Paul Perussina.

Dancing and refreshments followed the installation ceremonies. Representatives from many Posts from San Francisco as well as practically all of the Posts down the Peninsula were present. Such co-operation on the part of our comrades in our cause can mean only one result, Success.

Sunday, November 12, the V. F. W. window in the chapel at the Presidio of San Francisco, donated by the California and Nevada department, in which all the Posts had a most active part, was dedicated in a most impressive manner. Among those present we noted Colonel Potts, who received the window for the Presidio and the Government; Charles Carlston, member Nation Council of Administration; Comrades Rosendorf, member Department Council of Administration; Charles Gavin, Department Adjutant and Quartermaster; Merton Hubbard, Department Chief of Staff; Mrs. Hubbard, Auxiliary Senior Department President. The Commanders of Redwood City, San Mateo, McQuaide, Jacob H. Smith, Old Glory of Daly City, Alexander the Great, and many others. The Auxiliaries of nearly all the Posts were also present with their Auxiliary colors.

The window is one of beauty, and Comrade Leavitt, Department Past Commander, who was present on the occasion, is to be commended upon the wonderful work he has performed to procure this beautiful tribute to our comrades, both living and those who will never be able to join us in our work, having suffered the supreme sacrifice and sleeping on battlefields that the ideals for which our government stands might survive.

The National Defence Rally started on November 11, and every eligible member is to be contacted and an endeavor made to get him enrolled in our organization. To those comrades who are not eligible to join the Veterans of Foreign Wars, we urge them to join the organization to which they are eligible. Only by concerted effort on the part of the veteran organizations, and the enrollment of every eligible veteran in the ranks, will our disabled and incapacitated veteran receive the treatment rightfully his. Remember, comrades, that thousands of our comrades have given their very all for the ideals of Americanism are in want, and it will only be by numerical as well as financial support that injustices inflicted will be corrected. Think it over, comrades, and join up. Do it now. Don't delay. Act today.

Idaho Vandals Coming to Berkeley Saturday

Suffering no serious damage in the bitterly fought Washington State game, the Idaho Vandals will be at full strength for their Conference game at Berkeley tomorrow (Saturday) with the University of California.

On comparative scores against Washington State, the Golden Bears rank as slight favorites over the Vandals.

Coach Leo Calland will start a veteran lineup at Berkeley, according to indications. The strongest Vandal forward line in six seasons, which stopped the dangerous Cougar running attack cold, will open intact againts the Bears.

Idaho has her best opporunity in the three years of competition to trip up the Golden Bears. A rainy, muddy field slowed up Idaho's little giant, Willis Smith, in the first meeting in 1931, when California won, 19-0. Last year's game ended 21-6 for the Bears, John Norby, Idaho right halfback, grabbing a California fumble in the air and sprinting 67 yards to score for the Vandals.

Leo Calland is bringing the best Idaho squad in ten seasons to Berkeley next Saturday. A wide open running and passing attack, designed to spring little Willis Smith into the open field, has been the feature of the Vandals' offensive this season. Once into the opponent's secondary, Wee Willis needs no further assistance.

TRIO ESCAPE DEATH WHEN PINNED BENEATH AUTO

Pinned beneath ther wrecked automobile, three San Franciscans early last Sunday were released by rescuers only a few seconds before the wreck burst into flames. All three were seriously injured and were treated at Villa Sanitarium, Colma, only a few blocks from the scene of the accident on El Camino Real, near Cypress Lawn cemetery. The victims were Vince Andres, his wife, Mrs. Lucy Andres, and George Hill, all of 208 Winfield street. Mrs. Andres suffered a fractured shoulder. The two men were badly cut and bruised.

Washington Advocated the Use of Natural Gas

History tells us that the Chinese were the first people in the world to turn natural gas to practical use, though its presence had been discovered in other parts of the world centuries before. About the ciose of the first century A. D., gas escaping from beds of soft coal near Pekin was carried through pipes made of bamboo to salt works and used to boil the salt water so as to extract the salt by evaporation. The gas was then transmitted through pipes into Pekin for lighting that city.

The American people first had their attention called to natural gas by George Washington. In 1775 the man who was destined to become the first President of the United States attempted to have a section of a valley in West Virginia set aside for public exhibit, describing it as having been acquired by General Andrew Lewis and himself "for and on account of a bituminous spring which it contains, of so inflammable a nature as to burst forth as freely as spirits and nearly as difficult to extinguish."

Natural gas was first used for illuminating purposes in 1821, when it was piped to thirty burners in the town of Fredonia, N. Y. But it was not until the first oil well in the world was drilled in Crawford County, Penn., in 1859 that the sources of natural gas supply came to be exploited in practical fashion.

In California, as far back as the early '60's the people of Stockton and Sacramento were served with natural gas, though in small quantities. In 1901, gas was piped to Los Angeles from nearby oil fields and the development of the natural gas industry in the southland grew to a considerable extent. But in 1929, through the far-seeing enterprise of the Pacific Gas and Electric Company, natural gas was delivered into the San Francisco bay area by high-pressure transmission from the San Joaquin Valley oil fields and by 1930 the greater part of the "Pacific Service" territory was connected up with this wonderful fuel.

The domestic, as well as the industrial, heating problem was then and there solved. A fuel having twice the heating value of artificial gas and therefore, twice as economical, was made available to consumers in practically limitless quantity. Immediate results were found. The low cost of the new fuel came to the aid of the domestic budget at an auspicious moment, at a time when the general business depression was most acute. Cooking and heating bills were cut to half their former amount, allowing a wider distribution of the family income.

Today natural gas reigns supreme as a house heating agent. Heating devices of all kinds from the central furnace to the portable heater, are in the market in such variety to meet any problem of house construction and upon such terms as to meet the most modest domestic budget. The housewife owes it to herself to install some gas heating system in her home and so secure comfort as well as convenience to herself and all within her domestic circle.

Bank Employes Granted An Increase in Salary

Bank of America N. T. & S. A. and its associated state bank has announced increases in pay for 1,100 employes, to become effective on December 1, as a Christmas present to the employes affected.

In making the announcement, L. M. Giannini, Senior Vice-President, pointed out that the present salary adjustment is the second of its kind in recent months and is in line with the bank's previously announced policy of restoring salaries to a normal basis as general conditions and earnings continue to improve, and its desire to co-operate with the National Administration's program of increasing the volume of business by improving purchasing power.

The full amount of the increase for the month of December will be paid on December 15, in order to provide employes with these extra funds for Christmas shopping to stimulate the volume of holiday trade.

The present revision, placing the salaries of 77 per cent of the institution's personnel on the normal pre-depression basis of pay, is made possible by the substantial improvement in the bank's earning record. Between the call dates of September 30, 1932, and October 25, 1933, a period of approximately a year, the combined banks earned $8,078,356 from which $1,550,000 was paid in dividends. During the same period total deposits increased $35,799,275, and 364,416 new accounts were opened.

MAN STABBED DURING ROW; ASSAILANT LANDS IN JAIL

Dan Riley, 56, was taken to the South San Francisco hospital, suffering from abdominal stab wounds, and Mike Kelly, 48, was held by Daly City police, following an argument between the two men last Sunday night in Daly City. Both are Millbrae laborers. It is reported that Kelly had been drinking. Riley's condition is reported serious.

Health Nurse Must be Paid

Miss Hilda Schneider, county public health nurse, was duly appointed by Dr. Harold E. Morrison, health director, cannot be removed except by the latter official, and is entitled to her October salary of $175, according to an opinion rendered County Executive Walter T. Kellogg by District Attorney Edmund Scott last Friday.

Political Favors Banned

Holders of courtesy cards, wearers of badges and drivers of "IR" cars will receive no special consideration on San Mateo county highways, according to a warning issued by Captain Paul Perussina of the county traffic patrol.

Nomo Yakson, who says he is an Osage Indian from Oklahoma, is having the time of his life traveling on free transportation with free eats. Deported from San Francisco as a Mexican, he was refused entrance into Mexico, and was likewise denied sanctuary in Honduras, Salvador and Guatemala. He is being shunted back and forth on merchant ships, but can't land anywhere. But he is perfectly happy enjoying a prolonged period of "good eats, no work."

One of the most amusing incidents of an otherwise rather humorless season was what happened to Senator Copeland of New York a few nights ago in Erie, Pa., where he stopped on his way to Detroit. The able Senator is chairman of a committee which is investigating crime and racketeering. While sleeping peacefully in an Erie hotel some miscreant entered his room and stole his pants—also $400, which is too much money for even a Senator to be carrying around.

Don't Get Up Nights
Make This 25c Test

CARDS RECEIVE NOISY RECEPTION ON RETURN

More than 5,000, out with the noisiest reception tendered a Stanford team in years, were out to welcome the victorious Indians on their return to Palo Alto last Monday from the "Trojan wars."

Rallies at Palo Alto were followed by more of the same on the campus, and in the end the Cardinals were quite certain that the home folks had heard of what they were doing Saturday afternoon in the Los Angeles Memorial Stadium.

Palo Alto, even forty-eight hours after, was a roaring football town. The team was forced into hay-wagons and paraded through the town while the populace voiced its appreciation.

Examinations of San Mateo county school teachers on the U. S. Constitution has been set by Superintendent Pansy Jewett Abbott for December 2, at Redwood City.

My Neighbor Says:

LINGERIE must be tinted occasionally to preserve its dainty appearance. A faded blue garment will tint a delicate orchid with the aid of a pink dye, a pale yellow will shade into a delicate green if dipped in blue dye, and a pink dye will change the yellow to a shell pink. Be sure to use small quantities of the dye for these pastel shades.

This is a delicious and an unusual sandwich to serve with the afternoon tea: Mix one-quarter cup of finely chopped preserved canton ginger and one-third cup of chopped pecan nut meats. Add two tablespoons of finely cut candied orange peel, one tablespoon of ginger sirup, one teaspoon of vinegar, and a few grains of salt. Spread between thin unsweetened crackers.

LIGHTS OF NEW YORK

By L. L. STEVENSON

New York.—In Greenwich village, I saw a battered old truck that seemed to be conveying a colored picnic somewhere. A colored man was at the wheel with a colored woman, evidently his wife, at his side, while the body of the truck seemed to fairly swarm with children of assorted ages and sizes but all of the same shade. Tony, the garageman, explained that it was not a picnic. Tony was born and raised in Greenwich village. He has never lived anywhere else. So he knows the village and its people. The truck, he said, is a business enterprise. Its passengers constitute one family. The family carries on the business. So the number of children instead of being a detriment in the struggle for existence, is really an assistance. In fact, the more children, the greater the gross income.

The battered old truck is the official waste remover of the village. A number of apartment house owners are also willing to make small contributions. With a wife and a flock of children, the truck owner doesn't need any assistants. Thus he has no pay roll. The trash is taken to the family home, which is a Morton street cellar. There it is sorted. Practically all of it is salable in one form or another. Much furniture, in various states of repair, is collected. That which is salable is trucked up to Harlem and sold there either to individuals or to dealers. The papers are baled and sold, the market for old paper being decidedly bullish at present. The stuff that can't be sold either is trucked to dumps or is used to supply heat. And after Tony had told me that, I agreed that it wasn't any picnic.

Speaking of junk, there is the old German, an ex-member of the navy of his country and a jeweler by trade, who has a shack up on the Hudson near the shack colony known as Hoover city, which Riverside drive residents tried hard to eliminate but which is still very much in existence. Near the shack of the German a sailboat is moored. It is only a small craft which he constructed in spare time with whatever materials came to hand. But it furnishes him a living. In the little boat, during the summer he cruised up and down the Hudson sometimes going as far up as Albany. While cruising, he keeps a sharp look out for junk ashore, his specialty being brass. And because of the little boat and through his industry, he now has no fears for the winter even though he isn't able to find work at his trade.

Mention of Riverside drive causes me to recall that the woman who feeds the pigeons at One Hundred Fourth street and the drive is not deterred by weather. No matter how hard the rain may be falling, she comes out with rice and wheat and spreads a banquet for the birds. The pigeons do not seem to mind the rain, either, as they collect in great flocks and wait patiently until their benefactor appears. They are so tame and lazy they won't get out of the way until actually forced—by the feet of irate pedestrians. I've been told, or read somewhere, that officially all the pigeons in a city, not privately owned, are the property of the mayor. But I've never seen Mayor O'Brien feeding pigeons, though City Hall park has one of the largest colonies in the city.

Leaning over the wall of the observatory at Inspiration point, I watched a long string of barges being shepherded down the Hudson by two small tugs. One of the captains waved and immediately the old desire to be a barge captain arose within me. Soon there will be barge colonies at Coenties slip and elsewhere and the captains won't have anything to do except keep ship and sit around and yarn until spring.

HOOF AND MOUTH

"He's got the foot and mouth disease."

"Never heard of it, what's it like?"

"Whenever he opens his mouth he puts his foot in it."

AMERICAN ANIMALS

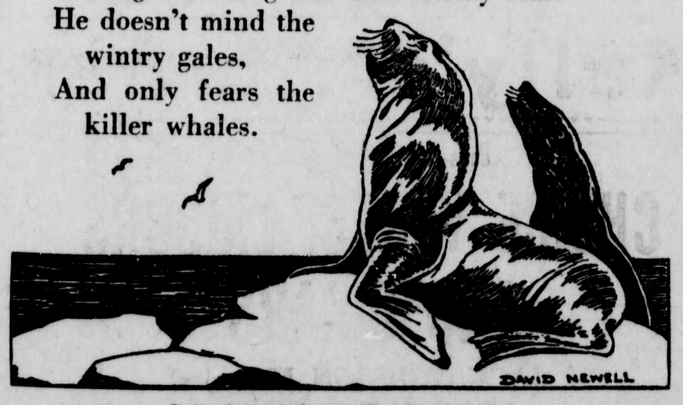

SEA LION

SEA LIONS live on barren shores;
They shake the rocks with savage roars.
And if you heard this frightful din,
You'd think their throats were made of tin.

The natives hunt them for their coats,
And use the skins to cover boats.
They eat the fat and use the flippers
To make new soles for boots and slippers!

This old bull climbs upon the boulders
To stretch his massive neck and shoulders;
He's fifteen hundred pounds in weight,
And twice as heavy as his mate.

He dives and swims with wondrous ease
Through foaming surf and stormy seas.
He doesn't mind the
wintry gales,
And only fears the killer whales.

HOW IT STARTED

By JEAN NEWTON

To "Bite the Dust"

IF EVER a phrase bore all the earmarks of 100 per cent American slang, certainly "to bite the dust" would seem to fill the requirements; yet, it would be hard to find one more rooted in antiquity or the classics.

Among the earliest recorded uses of this expression, which we understand to be a reference to a person who is killed and falls to the ground, or to one who is knocked down—are in Homer's "Illiad," book two, and Ovid's "Metamorphoses," book nine.

It was the translation of these famous works that popularized the phrase "to bite the dust"—put in tongues the world over.

Coeds in Texas Bring Food to Pay for Food

Canyon, Texas.—When coeds arrived at West Texas Teachers' college here this fall, many brought traveling bags and trunks filled with canned goods and other foods to offer as part payment for their board and room.

Randall hall, one of the dormitories on the campus, announced a co-operative plan of operation. Each girl is being charged approximately $13 per month, $6 of which may be paid in commodities brought from their homes and farms.

Housework at the dormitory will be done by the girls themselves under the direction of a supervisor, who also will be purchasing agent.

Irish Potatoes Yield New Industrial Alcohol

Dublin.—An industrial alcohol to be used as fuel for motor cars as well as in dyes, heating and lighting, has been developed from potatoes, it was revealed here.

Its production will be made a monopoly of the Irish Free State government.

Old Dutch Custom

Among Holland's quaint farming customs is that of baptizing calves before they are sent out to the fields to graze, the idea being that the sprinkling with water will keep the animals away from the ditches which surround the fields.

Game of Checkers to Last for Year

Sandusky, Ohio.—The world's most patient checker players began a game recently which may require more than a year to complete.

Clarence Coombs, Sandusky, mailed a letter to T. McLaven, of Durham, England, in which he informed the latter he had made the first move on his board here.

When McLaven receives the letter, he will make the first counter move, and notify Coombs by mail.

If the contestants don't run out of patience—or postage stamps—the game should be completed about this time next year.

GRAPE JELLY IS GREAT FAVORITE

Has Tang and Flavor That Always Satisfies.

By EDITH M. BARBER

RED, white and blue—American grapes—what an array of color! How tempting they are to use when we see them in their big clusters in their baskets. Perhaps we will buy a basket of mixed varieties for table use and then, when we find a large basketful, perhaps Concords, at a bargain price, we will hurry home and start our supply of jams, jellies, butter and possibly juice.

There are so many different "preserves" which we can produce with grapes as foundation. Concords, by the way, are usually the most practical to use for cooking purposes because they are so plentiful, and thus are usually the most economical. Remember, if you make grape jelly, that the greener, firmer grapes should be chosen unless you plan to combine the juice with pectin, when, of course, it makes no difference. While we seldom get unripe—green—grapes in the city, if we find a supply in the country, we can make a tart, piquant jelly which is especially good to serve with meat—almost as good, in fact, as the famous wild grape jelly, which ranks with wild plum and wild crabapple in my estimation, and I can give it no higher praise. Perhaps you know wild grapes under their country title, "Fox" grapes.

I wonder if you have ever made grape jam, using the skins as well as the pulp. You will get the most amazing number of glasses and you will have a marmalade which is more than delicious. If you like to add a further touch, put in a few cut walnuts five minutes before the jam is thick enough to put in the glasses. You may also vary this jam by cooking whole cloves and stick cinnamon with the fruit and adding as well a little vinegar. Then there is the more elaborate conserve which contains raisins, orange or lemon pulp and rind as well as nuts.

Another use that is made of cooked grapes in their season or of grapes canned in a light syrup is for a sauce to serve with duck. Sometimes a bit of spice or a bit of vinegar is added with the sugar. Then there is grape pie, usually made by cooking grapes until the seeds will pop out and then rubbing the pulp through a sieve before sugar mixed with a bit of cornstarch is added.

Sometimes these skins and a little grated lemon or orange rind are used as well for a filling for an open-face pie, which may have a lattice of strips of pastry if you like. The fruit bowl filled with dark-colored grapes makes a lovely fall centerpiece, which, however, must be replaced practically every meal, as no one can resist taking a bunch or two even when there is another dessert.

Ripe Grape Jelly.

4 cups (2 pounds) grape juice.
1 bottle pectin.
8 cups (3½ pounds) sugar.

Stem grapes and crush thoroughly. Add one-half cup of water, stir until mixture boils, and simmer, covered, ten minutes. Drip through jelly bag. Measure juice and sugar into large saucepan, stir and bring to a boil. At once add bottle pectin, stirring constantly and again bring to a full rolling boil and boil half minute. Remove from fire, let stand one minute, skim, pour quickly. Cover hot jelly with film of hot paraffin; when jelly is cold, cover with one-eighth inch of hot paraffin. Roll glass to spread paraffin on sides.

Spiced Grape Jelly.

1 cup vinegar.
Sugar.
1 tablespoon cloves.
5 pieces stick cinnamon, 1 inch long.

Cook the grapes, vinegar and spices together rapidly until the grape seeds show, and stir constantly. Strain through cheesecloth. For each cup of juice add three-fourths of a cup of sugar, and boil rapidly until the syrup jellies when tested. Pour into hot glasses. Cover with a light layer of melted paraffin and when hard add more paraffin, rotating the glass so that a high rim will be formed. Cover, label and store in a cool place.

Grape Conserve.

4 pounds Concord grapes.
2 pounds sugar.
1 cup seedless raisins.
1 orange, seeded and chopped.
1 cup finely chopped nuts.

Wash and drain the grapes. Stem, remove skins and reserve. Cook the pulp ten minutes, or until the seeds show. Press pulp through a sieve to remove the seeds. To the pulp add the sugar, salt, raisins and orange, seeded and chopped. Cook rapidly until the mixture begins to thicken and stir frequently to prevent sticking. Add the skins, cook for five minutes longer, or until thick. Stir in the chopped nuts and pour at once into hot jelly glasses. Cover with hot paraffin.

Grape Preserves.

4 pounds grapes.
4 pounds sugar.

Pick over, wash and stem grapes, press the pulp from the skins. Heat pulp to boiling point and cook slowly until seeds come to top. Rub through fine sieve. Return to kettle, add skins and an equal measure of sugar; cook slowly thirty minutes, stirring occasionally to prevent burning. Put in hot glasses and cover with hot paraffin.

New Instrument Measures to Millionth of an Inch

Leipzig.—A high precision instrument has been invented of such sensitiveness that it will measure the one-millionth of an inch. This marvelous advance in the delicacy of measurement is made possible by magnifying the slightest movements of the measuring device and making it visible to the eye by a stereopticon device on a large screen. It was exhibited at the Leipzig fair and checks the accuracy of measurements to a few seconds of the arc.

BEAUTY TALKS

By MARJORIE DUNCAN

THE HOME FACIAL

HAVING arranged your beauty articles and adjusted your head band, you are ready for the first step in your home treatment. Pour a little skin tonic in one of the small glass bowls. Moisten one of the small pads in the skin tonic and add the cleansing cream to the pad. Start cleansing with sweeping upward movements on the neck, up and around the neck, then on the face—three upward motions on either side of the face. Then around the chin, around the mouth, down on the nose and across the forehead.

Always be sure to use an upward motion.

Applying the cleansing cream with a moistened pad of cotton is the best method and really cleanses the skin thoroughly, not only removes surface dust, but penetrates the pores.

Having applied the cream all over neck and face, remove it with cleansing tissues. They are soft and silky and do not stretch the skin—and are economical to use in the long run because they save your towels and laundry bills. Remove the cream just as you applied it—with upward sweeping movements.

Now, with the face really clean we go to the second step, which is:

Saturate the large patter in the iced skin tonic. Start patting the neck, using a quick, staccato movement—a quick, slapping movement to whip up the circulation. Now up on the face, pat at the corners of the mouth, then across the mouth, then under the chin, then the other side of the face—keep patting briskly until your skin tingles. Hold the patter over the ice for a minute then knead under the eye and over the eyelids. Ice again. Repeat. This is excellent for puffiness under the eyes. By kneading, I mean a gentle pressing and lifting motion, working from the corner of the eyes out to temple both above and below the eyes.

Our skin needs exercise just as our body does, and patting with the skin tonic is the way to exercise it. Not just sponging the skin, but brisk patting for several minutes. This will stimulate the circulation, will help to normalize the oil content if the skin is too oily, or remove the flakiness we find in a dry skin. Don't use skin tonic indifferently—use it regularly—daily.

The skin needs constant study. Notice that it is inclined to be more dry in the winter and moist, normal or even a little oily in the summer. Notice how certain preparations affect it. Treat it to the diet that seems to be kind to it.

Three things are necessary toward perfect results in caring for the skin: first a definite understanding of your own skin, second the choice of preparations suited to it, and third the persistent use of these preparations in the right way.

APPLYING SKIN FOOD

ALWAYS after cleansing skin with cleansing cream, spend a minute or two patting with skin tonic. I cannot emphasize this too strongly. A good skin tonic should tone your skin, help to keep it clear, glowing, the pores refined. The tonic in itself is an excellent "pick-up" treatment if you have only a few minutes to spare before an important engagement or after a busy day.

Most women need a skin food. Dry skin especially. And this type of skin seems to be on the increase. Unless your skin is excessively oily, include a good, nourishing and preserving skin food in your home treatment. The proper movements for the application of this cream are important.

First movement—Apply the cream with long, sweeping, upward movements all over neck and face. Then using palm and cushioned parts of the fingers, knead the neck. Repeat at least six times. Remember kneading is pressing and lifting.

Second movement—To keep the contour firm and for the important muscle in front of the ear—use the cushioned part of the fingers, start under the chin and lift firmly—under the chin, under the contour (do not stretch or pull, but press and lift) keep lifting and pressing until you reach in front of the ear. Knead about seven distinct movements. Do the movements slowly and practice in front of the mirror.

Third movement—For the important muscles around the mouth and the line from mouth to nose—to prevent drooping and sagging: use three fingers of each hand. Start on chin and lift, lift, lift, using about six movements up from the chin—around the mouth to the side of the nose.

Fourth movement—Use palms of hands, grasp chin firmly and hold it, tense slightly, use five movements, lifting each time, lift under the chin, lift under the contour until you reach below the ear. Do this movement every night and morning. It will rebuild and firm the contour.

Fifth movement—To keep the eyelids full and firm: Place thumbs in front of ears. Starting in the center of the forehead, bend the index fingers. Now lift the brows, press slightly, lift, now move fingers outward a little, press and lift until you come to temple. Repeat very, very gently under the eyes.

RED CROSS ROLL CALL

Again the American Red Cross is in the midst of its annual roll call, which is made each year between Armistice Day and Thanksgiving. It deserves the support of everyone who can possibly contribute.

Communities which have happily escaped disaster can hardly appreciate the magnificent work of this foremost relief organization. A great fire, flood, storm epidemic or other cause of widespread distress immediately brings the Red Cross into effective action.

When the need for aid arises, the Red Cross responds unfailingly, promptly, efficiently. There are no delays, no hesitancy, no lost motion. With clock-like precision the trained personnel moves to its humanitarian task and sticks to it until it is finished.

While it was originally designed for the relief of suffering in time of war, the Red Cross has in late years become the greatest agency for emergency relief in time of peace as well.

It costs only a dollar to join the organization and thus become identified with its noble work. To do this is at once a duty, a privilege and an honor.

BETTER LIGHTING PAYS

Skimpy lighting in industrial plants lowers production, increases spoilage of materials and causes many accidents, according to the labor commissioner of New Jersey, whose department has made an extensive study of the subject. Poor lighting also causes serious eye strain, which further reduces the efficiency of the worker. A concrete example is given by the commission, in which the installation of a modern lighting system in a large industrial plant led to an increase of 12 to 16 per cent in production and reduced spoilage of material more than 50 per cent. It was also found that 18 per cent of industrial accidents in the state were caused by defective lighting arrangements.

Not only in factories, but in business houses, offices, school rooms and homes as well, good lighting pays in efficiency, comfort and improved eyesight. Its cost is trifling in comparison with the benefits it confers.

AFTER FIFTEEN YEARS

Fifteen years ago, on November 11, the greatest war of history came to an end through an armistice between the Allied powers and the United States on the one hand and Germany on the other.

This historic document was signed in Marshal Foch's special train at Rethondes, France, at 5 o'clock A. M., and provided for the cessation of hostilities six hours later. Accordingly the fighting ceased at 11 A. M.

While the Armistice of November 11 marked the real termination of the war, it was the fourth of a series of rapidly moving events which brought the titanic struggle to a close.

Bulgaria had already surrendered unconditionally at Salonica on September 29; Turkey had surrendered at Mundros on October 31; and Austria-Hungary had surrendered at the headquarters of General Diaz, the Italian commander, on November 3. Left thus alone in the struggle, the defeat of Germany was inevitable.

In fact, Germany had appealed to President Wilson for peace on October 6, and the time between that date and the Armistice was taken up with diplomatic correspondence and the working out of the conditions submitted to Germany for acceptance.

These conditions left Germany absolutely shorn of all military and naval power which might enable her to take the offensive again. Signing of the treaty of peace followed on June 28, 1919, at Versailles, near Paris.

Since that time many additional treaties, pacts and agreements have been entered into by various nations.

Continued effort to insure peace are being made by the world's leading statesmen, and upon the results of these efforts depend the most momentous consequences to the human race.

YOU SHOULD BUY NOW

Thrift is commendable. Everyone who can should save something. But while extravagant spending is harmful, too much hoarding is equally detrimental, according to leading economists.

For a long time there has been an unusual percentage of unemployed in this country, as in the rest of the world. This has decreased the total buying power of the public. But the tightening of purse-strings by those who are still employed and able to buy has reduced consumption to an even greater extent.

What is needed right now in order to aid in restoring normal conditions is more liberal spending on the part of those who have money to spend for things they can really use and need.

It has been pointed out that the additional spending of ten cents a day by every one of the one hundred and twenty million people in the United States would increase the nation's business to the extent of more than four billion dollars a year. Of course, the unemployed can not spend this extra ten cents a day, but millions of people could easily spend an additional dollar or more a day to good advantage and hardly miss it.

It is sound advice to say to those who can afford it: "Buy what you need while prices are low; employ a little extra labor that you can use to advantage; stop hoarding, and put more money into circulation."

By following this advice the more fortunate elements of our citizenship may do much to accelerate the return of general prosperity.

BIG MEN ARE SHY

It may sound cynical, but it is a fact that the really capable men of the country are becoming extremely shy of politics and political jobs. Whenever a man who has made a success in life is proposed as a candidate for either election or appointment, he is immediately pounced upon by the demagogues and hounded with out mercy, says a recent writer. The situation was sized up some time ago by Will Rogers, who with his keen insight said of presidential appointments:

"Big men won't take them, for they won't take a chance on a Senate insult. If he has ever earned more than a Senator, he is in league with big business. If he ever drove a Standard Oil truck or was a bookkeeper in a Morgan bank, he is in league with monopolies. If he is rich he is in league with the devil. But if he has never done anything and has been a financial failure at that, he will pass the Senate as a brother."

While these are the words of a humorist, and may not meet with general approval, we pass them along for what they are worth.

CORRESPONDENCE SCHOOLS

About two and a quarter million persons in the United States are now taking correspondence courses in various subjects, embracing almost everything under the sun. A majority of these courses are practical and helpful, while others are of questionable value.

Like every idea, the correspondence plan of teaching and study has been exploited from time to time by unscrupulous individuals, who promise results which any intelligent person should know are impossible of fulfillment. But this should not deter any earnest seeker for knowledge from enrolling in a correspondence school, because there are many such institutions of established reputation that are rendering splendid service to thousands of students.

The correspondence plan of study is sound in principle. The important thing is to select a school whose methods are sound in practice.

THE ARMY'S CHIEF

Few officers have had such a distinguished military career as has General Douglas MacArthur, who became chief of staff of the United States Army at the age of 50, the youngest ever to hold this highest rank.

Since he was graduated from West Point at the head of his class in 1903, he has held many important commands, and reached the rank of Major General a few days before he was 45. As a First Lieutenant he was military aide to President Theodore Roosevelt.

During the World war he served as Chief of Staff, Brigade Commander, and finally as commanding General of the famous Rainbow division with which he took part in the St. Mihiel, Meuse-Argonne and Sedan offensives, as well as other major operations, being wounded in action twice. After the war he served successively as superintendent of the Military Academy at West Point, commander of the Philippine division, Fourth corps area, Third corps area, and the Department of the Philippines, and has been president of the American Olympic Commission.

For his war service he received many American and foreign decorations, including the distinguished service medal.

The chief of staff is the son of the late Lieutenant-General Arthur MacArthur, who also had a notable Army career, having been a brevet Colonel in the Civil war before he was 20 years old, later serving in the Spanish-American war and during the Philippine insurrection.

THE MILK "CROP"

The importance of the dairy industry in the United States is interestingly set forth in comparisons made by James E. Boyle, Professor of Rural Economy at Cornell University, which show that milk is by far the greatest farm product in value.

In value per capita of population the figures are as follows: Milk, $25.23; corn, $15.91; hogs, $14.21; cotton, $11.06; hay, $10.39; poultry, $10.09; wheat, $8.53.

Thus it will be seen that the dairy "crop" is nearly equal to the corn and cotton crop combined, and greater than those of corn and wheat combined.

The consumption of dairy products, including milk, butter, cheese, and ice cream, is rapidly increasing, due to the education of the public to their food and health value. Dairying, combined with hog and poultry raising, should be an important feature in the farmer's program.

BERKELEY HANDICAP AT TAFORAN TRACK

Thirteen thoroughbreds have been nominated for the Berkeley Handicap, $1,500 added all age stake over the A. B. Spreckels course, Tanforan, Saturday, November 18. The race will mark the fourth stake of the forty day Fall meeting. The schedule calls for eleven fixtures in addition to overnight handicaps.

Three stars will make their season's debut in the Berkeley. Harry Unna will send forth Trombone. Desert Call, an ace from the Benny Creech barn, will make it his first out. Alexander Pantages' Sharp Thoughts will open his Fall campaign with this stake.

Teralice, beaten Saturday in the Burlingame Handicap, will return for revenge. Teralice and Trombone will run coupled as the Abe Bartelstein entry. Thombone was given a long rest at Imperial Beach, Cal. Trainer Harry Unna has him in rare shape now.

Tea Trader, the New Zealander, will try again to regain his former sprint prestige. He is improving under the careful prepping of Trainer Cuthbert Morse, and will be a "runnin' hoss" Saturday.

Bonny Grafton, winner of the Community Chest Handicap, will make her rivals step to catch her. She is more dangerous in a sprint than over a distance ground.

Ima Count, winner of the Juvenile Stakes, will be sent into action again. Although a two-year-old, he rates a good chance here. Boardwalker, victorious in the Inaugural Handicap, goes again Saturday. She was never better.

John W. Marchbank will be represented by the clever two-year-old, Sunny Bank. Bill Hartman has Reckoned, another good two-year-old, ready for the fray. Georgia Lily, a shifty three-year-old, will fly the silks of W. A. Dutton, Canadian sportsman. The Pasadena Stable will have an entry, Onrush and Fickle Chance, both endowed with high speed.

President is Encouraged By Reports of Progress

After a close study of charts showing increases in employment and total wages now being paid, the President believes the recovery program is making commendable progress. Secretary of Labor Perkins reported that the average hourly wage rose during October from 42 to 51 cents while the average hourly work week declined from 42 to 36 hours. A special report by Goverment economists asserts that the reaction in production in some of the major industries, principally confined to textile, leather, and steel, was the result of overproduction between March and July; hence a recession in those lines was unavoidable. It was between March and July that the National Recovery Administration to control hours of work was being organized. The President credits the NRA with the increase in work wages and decrease in hours. The latest chart shows the prices received by farmers for their products have increased from the spring up to October 11 from an index figure of 40 to 52, while the prices paid by farmers increased from the index figure 68 to 77, or 3 points net in favor of the farmer. These index figures are based on the level of 1926 as a parity of 100, the level which represents the Administration's goal.

AUTOMOBILE EVERY DAY NECESSITY FOR MILLIONS

Thirty years ago the United States had only 32,920 registered automobiles and trucks, according to the National Automobile Club. Today there are enough motor vehicles registered to carry every individual in the country at the same time. The automobile is an every day necessity for millions of people.

The largest registration ever recorded was in 1930, the year after the depression began. Since that time there has been some decline. A world census of automobile registration by the U. S. Department of Commerce accounts for 24,317,020 motor vehicles registered in the United States at the beginning of 1933, a drop of 6.4 per cent from the 1932 total. The peak of registration three years ago was 26,523,779. In view of what happened to business, industry and personal incomes during the last three years, it is remarkable that so many automobiles have been kept in operation.

Other countries have not become so dependent upon the automobile as is the United States. According to the Department of Commerce census, there were only 33,568,295 motor cars registered in the entire world at the first of this year. France has 1,845,000 cars, giving her second place in the list of countries using gasoline motor transportation. England is third with 1,385,472, and Canada fourth with 1,106,408. Germany lags behind with only 616,200 cars, followed by Australia, with 533,833. Next in order come Italy, Argentina, New Zealand, Belgium and Spain.

The absence of Japan in this list of eleven nations possessing most of the world's automobiles is notable. Automobile production in Japan is negligible, and only a small minority of the people can afford to buy motor cars. Liberia has the smallest number of automobiles in proportion to its population. One car is registered for every 47,170 inhabitants. Russia has only one car registered for every 5,128 persons.

After teaching its students for 900 years that the earth was flat, El-Azhar University of Cairo, Egypt, has at last succumbed to the spherical idea and will in future impart that fact to its pupils. The prophet Mohammed also has probably found out the truth of the matter by this time, if he exists in some spiritual sphere, and will approve of the innovation.

Although the recent national air pageant in New York was given for sweet charity, it lost more than $40,000. Stunts in the air have become so commonplace that they seem to be unable to attract paid customers in sufficient numbers to make aviation meets profitable.

A great and enthusiastic welcome was given the Lindberghs on the occasion of their recent visit to Moscow. Time recalls that when Lindbergh made his epochal flight from New York to Paris in 1927 only one Russian newspaper mentioned it at all, and that one gave it only three lines of type, printed three days late. Russians considered the feat "bourgeois sensationalism."

Plate glass insurance is one of the oldest forms of accident coverage, and was first written in Philadelphia 66 years ago. In those days it is said that Philadelphia far excelled New York in the way of modern shops making elaborate window displays, hence earlier equipped with plate glass windows.

Hold-ups and practical jokes do not go well together. At least they made a fatal combination for Ernest Fields of St. Louis. He held up and robbed eleven persons in a drug store and then made each drink a soda which he served them. While playing his little prank four policemen arrived and shot him to death when he offered resistance.

Queen Anne's Lace

SYNOPSIS

In a mood of disappointment, through her inability, due to the selfishness of her family, to put finishing touches to her costume for a long-anticipated country dance, Anne Chamberlain is irritated by the stolidity and lack of imagination displayed by her escort, George Hildreth (points he shares with most of her acquaintances).

"I don't see nawthin' funny about it," said George stolidly, "but they look nice, the way you've fixed 'em. You're awful sweet, Anne—couldn't you give me a kiss before we start for the dance?"

George did not get his kiss, but as he had not expected it, he was not unduly disappointed. Anne was always "offish." She hated to be "pawed." She flung away from him impatiently, and started, on a run, back up the lane. George followed at a more leisurely pace, chewing a piece of grass as he went.

When they were seated in his new top-buggy, with its slim, rubber-tired wheels, and were actually on their way into Hamstead, Anne relaxed, a little, and they fell into casual and friendly conversation.

"Are you pretty well through haying?" Anne asked noncommittally.

"Yes, Saturday night'll see it done."

"You've had good luck, haven't you?"

"Fine.—And the oats and corn's comin' along great, too. I don't know as I ever had a better year. And my creamery check keeps a-mountin' and mountin' straight along."

Anne made no direct response to this boastful statement, with its hidden thrust at her father's lack of prosperity in dismal contrast to her suitor's abundance.

"I'm thinkin' some of throwin' out a bay-winder in the dinin' room an' puttin' in a furnace. An' a bathroom. There's space for one beside the parlor chamber. The house needs paperin' an' paintin', too. It'll look real good when I get it fixed up. I cal'late I could get all them improvements done by late fall."

Again Anne gave no sign that she had drawn the obvious conclusion.

"You aren't honestly figurin' on teachin' another winter, are ye?"

"I think I better. Ten dollars a week helps out a great deal."

"It helps out yer family. I don't see that you get much outer it."

"Well, somebody's got to see that the taxes are paid, and that we don't starve, at least."

"Yes, and that somebody'll be you, just as long as you'll do it. There are two good husky youn 'uns, and an able-bodied man an' woman just settin' back and lettin' ye."

"George! Don't you dare criticize my family!"

"I shall, too—if yer so dead set on teachin', ye could keep on after we was married. You could do all the housework there is in my house with one hand tied behind ye, convenient like it all is. And you could hev all the money ye earned to spend on yerself—clothes an' books an' a planner."

He had scored at last. He saw it, and pressed his advantage.

"Ye've always wanted ter travel. We could take a real nice trip this fall. I could plan the work so's I could git away for a spell after the crops is all in, an' before the cows begin to freshen. We could go to Niagara Falls, or Montreal, or Boston."

"Oh, George, everybody goes to those places."

"Well, where do you want to go?"

"To New York. And—and Washington."

George gulped with surprise. But he was game.

"All right. To New York and Washington."

"Especially Washington. I'm crazy to see it. I think I'd like to live there."

"For Heaven's sake, Nan! Why you haven't a chance in the world, any more'n I have, of ever livin' anywhere but in West Hamstead."

"I know it. But I wish I had."

George saw his rosy dreams vanishing into thin mist. He sought to recapture them.

"But it'd be worth somethin' ter go. Mebbe we could go more'n once."

"Well—"

"Nan!"

"Lets' talk about something else for a while."

"Oh, Nan, please—"

He leaned forward, laying his hand earnestly on her knee, trying to look into her eyes. She put her own hand over his, gave it a friendly pressure, and then shook her pink skirt free of it.

"I can't, George," she said with equal earnestness. "Honestly, I can't. I know how much you'd try to do for me, and I do like you. But it isn't enough."

"It's a lot more'n you've got now."

"I know—when I said it wasn't enough I didn't mean that I wouldn't be lots more comfortable than I've ever been before. I know I would. I meant that I somehow couldn't look at things the way you do. And I don't care enough."

"You just said you liked me."

"I do. But I don't love you. That is, I don't believe I do. I don't like to have you touch me, and I certainly never wanted to touch you. That's a long way from feeling you'd be glad to marry a man. And it's further still from feeling as if you'd die if you couldn't."

"Won't you think it over some more?" asked George miserably. "You know how it's been with me, ever since we was kids. I'm a good provider. You shouldn't never lack nothin'. And I'd be a kind husband. We would be happy. If ye can't say yes, don't say no neither. Not for a while, anyways. That's not askin' much of ye."

Anne hesitated. She had no wish to be needlessly unkind, and she was really fond of George. He was, as he said, not asking for much.

"All right," she said at length, "I won't say 'no' yet, if you won't pester me. And if you won't talk about it any more tonight.—Have you heard what there's going to be for music at the dance?"

George settled back in the buggy with a sigh of mingled relief and triumph.

"The Wallacetown band's going to play," he replied. "Four pieces. I bet it'll be slick. I hear there's a number comin' down from there to go to it. Roy Griffin has got company. A feller he knew at college, named Neal Conrad, is visitin' him, so they're gettin' up a party. Conrad's come up from Hinsboro where he lives, in one of these new-fangled horseless carriages. I don't think much of them."

"Don't you? Where have you seen one?"

"I ain't seen one. But I've heard tell."

"In the post office, sitting around the airtight with a lot of other mossbacks who never saw one either, I suppose," said Anne scornfully. "Oh, George! Don't you see? It's just as I said! We never look at things the same way! I believe that horseless carriages are going to be a great success, and revolutionize transportation. I wish I had a chance to go out in one."

"Well," said George sarcastically, "mebbe Neal Conrad will ask ye to.

"All Right," She Said at Length, "I Won't Say 'No' Yet, If You Won't Pester Me."

Roy and him are comin' down to the dance in his. That's what I started to tell you."

The words were hardly out of his mouth before he repented them. He had put an idea in Anne's head that might much better have been left out of it. Of course, it was not probable that this city dude would take any notice of her, but it was possible. He inwardly cursed his stupidity, and they drove on in silence.

The "ball" had not been in progress half an hour before his worst fears were realized. He had paid for their tickets, fifty cents apiece, while Anne withdrew to leave her knitted shawl in the dressing room, and exchange a few joyous, whispered confidences with her best friend, Mabel Buck, who was waiting for her there; when she returned, he sat down beside her, to scrawl his initials at frequent intervals over her "program" with the small tasseled pencil attached to it. The first and last dances were his by unwritten law, of course, because he was her escort; but he wanted to secure as many as possible in between these before the Hamstead fellows, who had come to know her when she was going there to high school, butted in. He had to hurry. David Noble and Austin Gray were already crossing the floor in their direction, and others would follow close upon their heels.

"Don't take too many," whispered Anne, who was watching developments quite as carefully as he was, but with other ends in view, "you don't want to make the whole town think we're engaged."

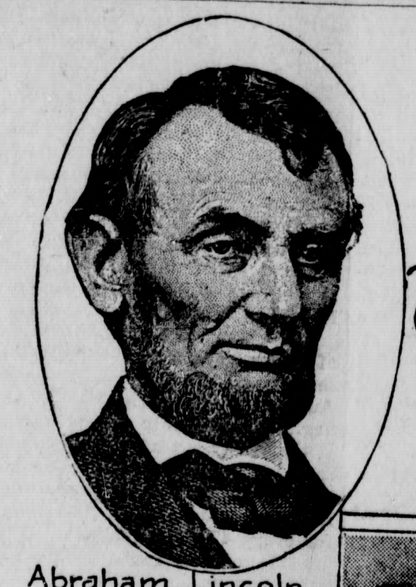

"Why, of course I do! Every one knows we're keeping company! Now, Anne—"

"If you say another word about it tonight, I won't dance with you at all— Hello, Austin, hello, David, I'm awfully glad to see you.—Yes, I've got most of them free. George, do give me back that program. Goodness, you've written your name all over it. Have you an eraser?"

"No," said George doggedly.

"Then I'll have to get another program."

They Gave Us Our Thanksgiving Holiday

Sarah Josepha Hale

"Home for Thanksgiving" from a Currier & Ives Print

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

ASK ten Americans "Why do we celebrate Thanksgiving on the last Thursday in November?" and nine of them probably will answer "Why, that's because the Pilgrim Fathers who established it celebrated it then." And that, like so many of our "popular beliefs," is only a half-truth, at best. It's true that the Pilgrim Fathers were principally responsible for Thanksgiving day being a red-letter day on our calendars. But it's also true that we owe the establishment of Thanksgiving day as a national holiday on a certain date (certain to the extent that it always occurs on the last Thursday in November) mainly to two persons, a man and a woman, to Abraham Lincoln and Sarah Josepha Hale.

But before discussing their part in the matter of establishing this popular national holiday, let's check up a bit on the history of the development of Thanksgiving. The story of the first New England Thanksgiving, from which our present-day celebration is a direct descendant, is familiar to all Americans—how that first winter of the Pilgrims in America had been a terrible one of cold and sickness which had left only 55 of the little company of 101 alive when the spring of 1621 came around, how all through the summer they watched with the greatest anxiety the progress of the crops they had sown, and how when autumn came there was a bountiful harvest.

Then, according to Mourt's "Relation, or Journal of the Plantation at Plymouth": "Our harvest being gotten in, our Gouvenour sent foure men on fowling, that so we might after a more speciall manner rejouce together, after we had gathered the fruit of our labours; they foure in one day killed as much fowle, as with a little helpe besides, served the Company almost a week, at which time amongst other Recreations, we exercised our Armes, many of the Indians coming amongst us, and amongst the rest their greatest King Massasoyt, with some ninetie men, whom for three dayes we entertained and feasted, and they went out and killed five Deere, which they brought to the Plantation and bestowed on our Gouvernour, and upon the Captaine, and others."

The popular view is that this "first Thanksgiving" was the beginning of a series of such celebrations every year. But the fact is that the following year, 1622, no such observance occurred. In 1623 a day of thanksgiving was held but not in the autumn and not in connection with the harvest. It was observed on July 30 and had to do with the safe arrival of a shipload of provisions from England.

From then on for decades Thanksgiving was observed in most irregular fashion. Some years were skipped; some years had more than one celebration—sometimes for the arrival of ships, more often for victory over the Indians, as in the instance of quelling the Pequots in 1637 and the defeat of King Philip in 1676. It was not until 1689 that the Massachusetts general court issued the first recorded formal Thanksgiving proclamation.

During the Revolutionary war the people and the army observed an annual Thanksgiving day by proclamation of the Continental congress, but after peace was declared it was discontinued until 1789.

In that year a new element came into the observance of Thanksgiving and one which has survived in the present celebration. That was the Presidential proclamation of a Thanksgiving day for the whole nation and it was George Washington, the first President, who issued such a proclamation setting aside Thursday, November 26, 1789, as the day.

It so happened that Thursday, November 26, 1789, was the last Thursday in November that year and that fact was to have an important bearing on the later history of Thanksgiving day, as we shall see farther on in this article.

But although Washington was the first to issue a Presidential proclamation for a national Thanksgiving day, he did not establish a precedent which was followed consistently. During his second administration, he again issued a Thanksgiving proclamation. On January 1, 1795, in Philadelphia, which was then the national capital, he called upon his fellow Americans to "set apart and observe Thursday, the nineteenth day of February next, as a day of public thanksgiving and prayer, and on that day to meet together and render their sincere and hearty thanks to the Great Ruler of Nations for" a long list of blessings which the country was then enjoying.

The example set by Washington was followed by his successor, John Adams, who proclaimed two Thanksgiving days during his administration—one on Wednesday, May 9, 1798, and the other on Thursday, April 25, 1799. This custom, however, was allowed to lapse during the two terms of Thomas Jefferson, but it was revived by James Madison who issued four such proclamations during his administration. The first one of these set aside the third Thursday in August of 1812, the second named the second Thursday in September, 1813, as the day; the third designated Thursday, January 12, 1814, and the fourth and last set aside the second Thursday in April, 1815.

Thus it will be seen that although Thanksgiving days by Presidential proclamation in the main picked upon Thursday as the day of the week for such an observance, the month varied greatly and there was no connection between these Thanksgiving days and the annual observance established by the Pilgrims. No other Presidents after Madison seemed to have had occasion for proclaiming a Thanksgiving day and it remained for Abraham Lincoln to resume the custom and to link up the proclaimed Thanksgiving day with the Pilgrim custom by establishing the last Thursday in November as a national feast day and a day for giving thanks.

But before adding another star to the crown of the Great Emancipator, heed now the ancient French admonition, "Cherchez la Femme!" It is here that Sarah Josepha Hale comes into the Thanksgiving picture. For it was Mrs. Hale, a native of Newport N. H., known wherever English is spoken as the author of "Mary Had a Little Lamb," editor of the famous magazine, Godey's Lady's Book, and a pioneer in educational and civic problems of her day who, by canvassing the governors of states and territories and reconciling sectional differences, and by appealing constantly to successive Presidents, brought about the establishment of Thanksgiving day as a national holiday on the last Thursday in November.

Sarah Josepha Hale was a far-sighted woman in many respects. She was the first to advocate women teachers in public schools. She demanded for housekeeping the dignity of a profession, and put the term "domestic science" into the language. She started the first day nursery, and was the first to stress the necessity of physical training for her sex, as well as the first to advocate public playgrounds. She founded the first society for the advancement of women's wages, better working conditions for women and the reduction of child labor.

As early as 1827 she began advocating a nation-wide observance of Thanksgiving day. "We have too few holidays," she wrote at that time. "Thanksgiving, like the Fourth of July, should be considered a national festival and observed by all our people . . . as an exponent of our republican institutions."

But it was not until 1846 that she began her campaign through the editorial columns of Godey's Lady's Book to hold such a nation-wide celebration on a certain date and every year from that time on she waged her campaign. Early in the spring she would write letters to the governors of all the states and territories, and to influential persons everywhere, asking their assistance in making the last Thursday in November, which had been Washington's choice, a universal holiday. In the hope of bringing pressure to bear upon the governors, she next opened correspondence with literally thousands of private persons of influence, with senators and congressmen and the clergy.

In her effort for the establishment of state Thanksgivings she was almost immediately successful. By 1849, the third year of her campaign, most states and territories were keeping individual festivals, but no attempt was made to coincide the dates. Maine might celebrate—and frequently did—in September, Virginia in October and Pennsylvania in November.

A conglomeration of state holidays, however, was not by any manner of means Sarah Hale's goal. She dreamed of the states joined in a great national observance, and to this end she soon began appealing to whoever happened to be the President in office. Using Washington's single act as a precedent and example, she privately wrote again and again to Fillmore, Pierce and Buchanan, all to no avail. It was an age when women outside the home were seen and not heard. She herself at the time was the only successful business woman in the country. Feminine meddling in public affairs was not only frowned on but resented.

Mrs. Hale was quite aware of this antagonistic attitude. In one of her letters to President Fillmore, now preserved in a public collection at Buffalo, she begged his excellency not to be prejudiced against the idea because he was being addressed by a woman! He may not have been so prejudiced, but at least he did nothing about it. Neither did Pierce, his successor, nor Buchanan, who preceded Lincoln.

Failing with the Presidents, she fell back on her editorials, thus carrying her appeal again directly to the people. As early as 1852 she had succeeded in whipping 29 states and territories into line for the last Thursday of November. Each year all through the seething '50s she proclaimed in Godey's Lady's Book that that day would be Thanksgiving day, and in the main the country kept it with her. The most gigantic civil strife in the history of the world was pending, and political and sectional bitterness was rife.

In 1859, while the storm was brewing, she was more vigorous than ever with her thanksgiving plan, in hope that it might help to avert disunion. "If every state," she wrote in an editorial in Godey's, "would join in union Thanksgiving on the twenty-fourth of this month, would it not be a renewed pledge of love and loyalty to the Constitution of the United States which guarantees peace, prosperity, progress and perpetuity to our great Republic?" So in 1859 an almost universal Thanksgiving day was kept, not in response to a Presidential proclamation but because a woman asked it.

In 1861, with the smoke of battle darkening the land, Mrs. Hale begged for a "Thanksgiving Day of Peace," but there was no peace. In 1862 she again failed, but in 1863 she won—after 17 years.

It came about in this way. In the September number of Godey's she wrote: "Would it not be better that the proclamation that appoints Thursday the twenty-sixth of November (1863) as the day of Thanksgiving for the people of the United States of America should, in the first instance, emanate from the President of the Republic—to be applied by the governors of each and every state, in acquiescence with the Chief Executive advisor?"

On the twenty-ninth of September she received from Seward, Lincoln's secretary of state, an answer to her letter to the President, stating that it was receiving official attention. Four days later, Abraham Lincoln issued the first national Thanksgiving day proclamation since Washington's day. In it he said "And so . . . the last Thursday in November is hereby set apart as a day of thanksgiving and praise." That set the precedent and Lincoln followed it up the next year, 1864, by naming the same date (the last Thursday) in his second and last regular Thanksgiving day proclamation. Since that time other Presidents have never deviated from the custom, nor have governors of the states.

As for Sarah Josepha Hale, "the Mother of Thanksgiving," so long as she remained editor of Godey's Lady's Book (she resigned in December, 1877), she stood guard over her cherished holiday. Had it not been for her, in the years of civil strife and reconstruction the precedent set by Lincoln might very well have been put aside, but by the time she laid down her editorial pen, in her ninetieth year, the custom had been firmly established. Thanksgiving day had taken its place in the hearts of all the people and on the calendar of the nation for all time to come.

TRUCKMAN'S BODY FOUND IN DITCH

Walter Japp, a Bayshore truckman, was found dead shortly after 10 o'clock last Sunday morning in a ditch at Bayshore under circumstances which led authorities to investigate a murder theory.

The dead man, who had suffered a skull fracture, was found with head submerged in a foot of water at the bottom of the ditch, but no water was found in the lungs, said an autopsy report by Dr. T. C. Doak, of South San Francisco.

Draining the water from the ditch, police found a pointed rock which they declared had caused the skull fracture. The rock bore traces of hair and blood, the hair identified as having come from the victim's head, said Deputy Coroner S. Nieri, South San Francisco. The foul play theory was abandoned.

Jaap, who lived at 305 Orient street, Bayshore, pitched into the ditch while walking home late Saturday night, anthorities decided. He struck the rock after a plunge of about ten feet.

CATS AND RATS

What does a cat do when it sees a rat? Sounds like a foolish question, doesn't it? And ordinarily it would be, but Zing Yang Kuo, a noted Chinese psychologist, says it all depends on the cat's bringing up.

After innumerable experiments with fifty-nine kittens in his laboratory, he finds that sometimes cats and rats become affectionate playmates. This occurs when the cats and rats are placed together practically from birth. Even without this contact, only 45 per cent of his kittens attempted to kill rats unless they had seen their mothers do it, while after seeing a rat killed nearly all followed the mother's example.

So, Professor Kuo says, "our studies show that kittens can be made to kill a rat, to love it, to hate it, to fear it, or to play with it."

All of which is interesting, even though the practical benefit of this knowledge of rat psychology is not apparent to the layman.

SPLINTERS

From the H. H. Smith Lumber Yard

VOLUME 6 FRIDAY, NOVEMBER 17, 1933 NUMBER 17

Published in the interests of the People of Daly City and vicinity by H. H. Smith and Employees.

"I've been noticing your wife's driving; it certainly is improving a lot."

"Ah, do you really think so? I was afraid that I was merely getting used to it."

Kindling and Block Wood.

Nurse: "I lost sight of the child, ma'am."

Ma'am: "Good gracious! Why didn't you speak to a policeman?"

Nurse: "Well, I was speaking to one at the time."

The nudists seem determined not to let their neighbors get a thing on them.

Instead of trying to get ahead, many people waste time trying to get even.

"Yes," she said, "I believe I could love a poor man."

"Then why not marry me?" he demanded.

"But not enough," she went on, "to have the alarm clock wake me out of pleasant dreams to get up and make his coffee and fry him an egg before he went to work every morning."

Good Coal saves you money. Why not try Aberdeen?

Bank Cashier: "So you want to open a joint acocunt with your husband. A current account I suppose."

Mrs. Brown: "A current acocunt for me, yes, and just a deposit account for my husband."

It takes a lot of will power to match some wives' won't power.

"You are reading a travel book. Preparing for a holiday?"

"No. I'm on a holiday now. I sit here and dream of travel."

"But you are reading the book backward."

"Yes. I'm on the return journey."

Diner: "You advertised that this restaurant was under new management, but I see the same manager is still here."

Witer: "Yes, sir, but he got married yesterday."

To persevere is one's duty, and to be silent is the best answer to calumny.
